“ I have several special memories with Virginia but what stands out in my mind is how she loved her boys. She was so very proud of Chris and Kevin. When my children were younger she use to come over and thoroughly enjoy taking my babies for walks around the neighborhood. She loved to do that which gave me a little reprieve. Virginia made great pies and soft sugar cookies to share with her family. Virginia was also generous with helping out families with money and I was on the receiving end when I hit difficult times when our family was young. I also remember that when a good friend who was in a serious car accident could no longer walk Virginia stepped in to help them financially for several years until they told her they were good. Virginia was thoughtful and had a gentle spirit and if you knew her you knew she had a lot of compassion for those around her. Rest In Peace Virginia.

“ My grandmother was an inspiring human who was resilient, kind, wise, loving, and hardworking.

If you knew her well, you most likely received a handwritten letter about what was happening with her life, and asking you what was going on with yours. I am happy to have kept my Grandma Ginnie letters over the years.

One of my favorite memories was when Grandma Ginnie first met my daughter Lucy as a baby. Grandma had only met my wife Vironica once before, and Vironica was still fairly shy around my family. Grandma Ginnie wanted to take Lucy on a walk in her stroller but got her name confused with my wife's name. Unaware that Grandma Ginnie mixed up their names, Vironica nervously agreed to go. I, fully aware of the mix-up, found it very entertaining to see Grandma Ginnie's insistence to walk Vironica, and even encouraged it, as my wife confusedly began to put on her shoes. To Vironica's relief, grandma Ginnie packed up Lucy into the stroller and went on a walk.

Another fond memory was a time I had a meal with Grandma Ginnie sitting at window with mountain views. As a storm rolled in over the mountain, she commented on how she always loved thunder storms and segued into a beautiful, personal story from her youth. The poetic comparison between the storm and that period in her life made me feel so privileged to have this special memory with her. I will always keep that conversation close to my heart and remember her when I see a storm on the horizon.

A testament to her hardiness was the fact that she had 9 fingers. When I was a boy, I asked her how she lost her 10th. She replied, "The washboard took it from me." Upon seeing my wide-eyed disbelief, she raised her hand, fingers outstretched, allowing me to press the knuckle where the finger once sat. Her childhood and early years on Slisher Farms made her tough, calm, and gave her the grit I've tried to emulate in my own life.

I'm going to miss my Grandma Ginnie. I cherish the photos I have of her chatting with my eldest child, and of her holding my second. The last time I saw her we talked about my third. I hope to keep her memory alive telling my children the many legends of Grandma Ginnie.

“ One of my most favorite memories of my mother was on my 9th birthday. She took me down to the Schwinn bike shop and bought me a purple stingray bicycle with a banana seat. The next day I was treated to Disneyland with my neighborhood friends. She could not have made me any happier...now I am tearing up. She kept looking at me and asked " Are you going to ever stop smiling?"

She known for being extremely kind and shy, however well liked by her classmates.

“ We didn't see Aunt Virginia very often since we lived across the country from them, but she stayed in touch. When I was in college she wrote to me and often would send me a little spending money. She was always such a kind and gentle person. Wish I could have known her better. I'm glad I visited her in 2009.
